Study Title: Comparative Effects of BCI-Based Attention Training, Methylphenidate, and Citalopram on Attention and Executive Function in School-Age Children: A Naturalistic Quasi-Experimental Study

Principal Investigator: Assoc. Prof. Serkan Turan, MD Department of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry Bursa Uludağ University Faculty of Medicine, Turkey

Introduction

Your child is invited to participate in a research study because of attention-related difficulties. Participation is voluntary, and you may withdraw your child at any time without affecting care.

Purpose of the Study

The purpose of this study is to compare different clinical approaches used to support attention and executive functioning in school-aged children.

Study Procedures

Your child will complete routine clinical assessments, computerized attention tasks, and may receive BCI-based attention training, medication, citalopram, or combinations as part of standard care.

Duration

Participation will last approximately 8 weeks.

Risks and Discomforts

This study involves minimal risk, similar to routine clinical practice.

Potential Benefits

Your child may or may not directly benefit. The study may help improve future treatments.
Confidentiality All data will be kept confidential and de-identified.

Voluntary Participation

You may withdraw your child at any time without penalty.
